Winter won't leave us alone

These are two Sandhill Cranes spotted south of the canal off of Seashore Road. The birds are rare to this area but they may be from a flock in Cumberland County or as far away as Nebraska.
