HOUSE OF THE WEEK

Special to the Cape May Star and Wave

Above, the home 100 Second Ave. in Cape May currently on the market through Century 21 Gilmartin and Company for $1.35 million. Below, the first floor living room. Bottom, the view from the second floor balcony at the rear of the house.

Location is everything on Second Avenue

CAPE MAY – Realtors everywhere talk about location, location, location – it being the primary definition of home value.

Nowhere is that more true than at 100 Second Ave., Cape May now being listed with Century 21 Gilmartin and Company. This corner lot, two story home, is located one block from Cape May beaches, but that is only the beginning. Walk out the door and you are steps away from walking onto the Cove beach; a little farther and you are walking on the state park beaches.

From a second floor deck, there is an unparalleled view of the Nature Conservancy and state park. The next owner will be able to sit on the deck and watch any variety of ducks and other water-fowl landing in a pond located just beyond the property line.

Scanning over the meadows, one can see the Cape May Point Lighthouse and enjoy its lightshow each night and as it marks land for passing boats. During the day, view the beaches where the ocean and bay meet. During the night experience sunsets from the comfort of your own deck.

What's more, being located adjacent to preserved parkland, your view will never change, with the exception of seasonal colors.

The house itself is something special. Walk in the front door and you are faced with a fully enclosed porch for enjoying summer light and breezes. One of the most remarkable features about the first floor is the abundance of windows, which allow in southern light and ocean breezes. The windows contribute to the open, flowing floor plan of this house. Standing in the kitchen area, one can look back through the dining room and living room, and vice versa, and feel the roominess and flow.

One will also notice the 1930s era craftsmanship in woodwork surround
